Christopher Steelman is an associate in DLA Piper's Financial Services Regulatory Practice. His practice focuses primarily on the state and federal regulatory framework for both depository and non-depository financial institutions, including banks, thrifts, money services business, consumer and commercial lenders and similar financial entities. He has been actively involved in Dodd-Frank implementation for clients, including the Volcker Rule and Durbin Amendment. His practice also involves the application of financial and consumer protection laws, including TILA, FCRA and FDCPA, and their implementing regulations to a variety of business organizations that are not typically considered financial institutions.

PUBLICATIONS

- Federal regulators release Volcker Rule final regulations, Financial Services Alert (US), 11 Dec 2013
- FSOC approves final rule on systematically important nonbank financial firms, Financial Services Alert (US), 5 Apr 2012
- Federal agencies release rules for risk retention under Dodd-Frank, Financial Services Alert (US), 4 Apr 2011
- Federal Reserve issues proposed rule on debit interchange fees and network restrictions, Financial Services Alert (US), 17 Dec 2010
- Federal banking agencies adopt final rules implementing the SAFE Act, Financial Crisis Response Alert (US), 2 Aug 2010
- "When Private Equity Meets Banks: The Impact of Banking Regulations on Private Equity Investments," The Journal of Private Equity, Vol. 11, No. 3, Summer 2008 (co-authored with Jeffrey L. Hare)